SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

Confidential British Foreign Office Political Correspondence

The General Correspondence files were and still are the main repository for the documents collected by the British Foreign Office. Dating from January 1, 1782, the same year as the creation of the Foreign Office, the General Correspondence files contain the vast majority of the documentation received and created by the Foreign Office. These are the working papers of the Foreign Office used in the development of British foreign policy. The information contained in the documents was often classified and was not made available for study outside of the British Government until many years after their creation.

The Foreign Office completely revised its filing system in 1906. Since then the papers have been arranged into eleven classes of General Correspondence: Africa, New Series; Commercial; Communications; Consular; Contraband; Dominions Information; Library; News; Political; Prisoners of War and Aliens; and Treaty. Each of these classes contains the papers of the department after which it is named, except for Political, which is composed of the several political departments.

This publication contains copies of only the Political class of General Correspondence. The Foreign Office is internally divided into departments. The political departments are those in which the diplomatic business of the Foreign Office is conducted. Diplomatic business should be thought of in very broad terms. It includes not only the formal relations between two countries but also the information needed by the British government in order to conduct diplomatic relations. This includes the domestic political, economic, social, and cultural conditions of another country plus that country's relations with other nations, as well as British internal political concerns.

Each political department is responsible for the diplomatic relations between Great Britain and a number of countries. Below are listed the political departments and the countries for which they were responsible during 1920 and 1921.

1920

1. American and African: U.S.A., Mexico, Central America, South America, Morocco, Abyssinia, and Africa.
2. Central European and Persia: Germany, Austria, Hungary, Italy and Albania, Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia, Roumania, Greece, and Persia.
3. Eastern and Egyptian: General and Egypt.
4. Far Eastern: China, Japan, Siam, and Cambodia.

5. Northern: Russia, Finland, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Poland, and the Baltic States.
6. Western, General, and League of Nations: France, Spain, Portugal, Belgium, Holland, Luxemburg, and Switzerland.

1921

1. American and African: U.S.A., Mexico, Central America, South America, Abyssinia, and Liberia.
2. Central European and Persia: Germany, Austria, Hungary, Italy, Czechoslovakia, Jugo-Slavia, Roumania, Bulgaria, and Greece.
3. Eastern: Turkey, Caucasus, Persia, Egypt, and Hejaz.
4. Far Eastern: China, Japan, and Siam.
5. Northern: Russia, Finland, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Poland, and the Baltic States.
6. Western, General, and League of Nations: France, Spain, Portugal, Belgium, Holland, Luxemburg, and Switzerland.

In this microfilm University Publications of America published the formerly confidential General Correspondence: Political files on Germany from 1920 to 1921. The papers for each year were bound into volumes by the Foreign Office in the order in which they were originally filed. The majority of the documents found in these files are despatches, letters, and telegrams from British diplomatic posts to the Foreign Office and Foreign Office letters, telegrams, and instructions to the posts. In addition, there are a large number of documents created by the Foreign Office such as minutes of meetings, reports, and correspondence with other government ministries and foreign government embassies in London. Also cabinet papers dealing with foreign policy and parliamentary debates are kept in these files.

All documentation coming into the Foreign Office was opened by the Central Registry and placed inside docket sheets. Each docket sheet was stamped with the name of the country and the series (if not political), with the date of receipt and with a registry number. In the case of outgoing correspondence that was not a response, a copy of that paper would receive its own docket sheet and registry number. The registry number began at number one each year and dockets were numbered consecutively as they were received by Central Registry. One numbering series was used for all departments within the Foreign Office.

Docket sheets with the enclosed document would then be forwarded to the department responsible for that country. Officials in the department would then review the document and decide if and/or what action would be taken on the information contained in the document. Space on the docket sheets was available for officials to record recommendations and additional information pertinent to that document. In addition, all documentation created in response to the original document was attached to the original docket sheet. These would include internal Foreign Office memoranda and reports, Cabinet meetings and papers, and drafts and copies of the replies to the original document.

When action on a docket sheet and its attached papers was completed, it was returned to the Sub-Registry (there was a Sub-Registry on each floor of the Foreign Office). There the papers were filed by year, country, and subject for ready reference. Papers on the same subject would be filed together in numerical order with the lowest registry number first. The first registry number in the file was used as the file number. After one and a half to two years an annual file would be transferred to the library.

Germany, 1920–1921

Great Britain and the rest of Europe had just finished its biggest and bloodiest war in history. Out of a total of about 10,000,000 dead and 20,000,000 wounded, Britain sustained just under 1,000,000 dead and a little over 2,000,000 wounded. In addition to these human losses, Britain sustained tremendous financial losses due to the war. The German military, which had been the principal foe of the Allies, had surrendered in November 1918. The Treaty of Versailles provided for the formal political peace to the war and included the terms under which the vanquished German state would obtain peace.

Great Britain along with France and the United States were the principals who designed the peace treaty. Britain had three main concerns regarding Germany in the future:

1. Preventing Germany from again becoming a military threat in Europe. Britain was especially concerned with dismantling Germany's navy and preventing its growth in the future. Submarines were banned under the treaty.
2. Securing reparations from Germany to help pay huge war debts including billions of dollars owed to the United States.
3. Preventing a Communist takeover.

For these three main reasons, plus a host of lesser issues, Great Britain was very interested in what was happening inside Germany after the war. Both the Foreign and War Offices had large numbers of representatives in Germany reporting on activities at both the national and local levels. In addition, Great Britain was a principal power in the many Allied negotiations after the war regarding Germany's fate under the Versailles treaty, and British officials along with other Allied nations' officials staffed the many committees and commissions that oversaw the implementation of the Versailles peace treaty. The quantity of documentation on Germany in the Foreign Office's Political Correspondence Files for 1920–1921 is greater than for any other nation; the quality of the information gathered in these documents is crucial to understanding British policy toward Germany and the Allied influence on postwar Germany. This is also the most comprehensive non-German language collection on the internal affairs of Germany for this period.
