SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

When American armies entered Germany in the spring of 1945, they discovered large amounts of gold hidden by the Germans. At that time, elements of the U.S. Third Army, racing across Germany, stopped at the Kaiseroda Mine at Merkers, because they had been informed by local residents that the German Reichsbank had, within the preceding weeks, stored gold and other valuables there. Upon entering the mine, the soldiers found stacks of gold bars, bags of gold coins, and millions of dollars' worth of foreign currencies, art treasures, and other valuables that had been looted from central banks in German-occupied countries, individual civilians, and victims of Nazi persecution. When an accounting of the gold was taken by the U.S. Army, with the help of U.S. Treasury officials, it was determined that the gold was worth $238.5 million (equivalent to approximately $2.5 billion today). During subsequent weeks, the U.S. Army uncovered gold valued at about $14 million in Reichsbank branches as well as $9.7 million from other sources. By that summer much of it was stored in the Reichsbank building in Frankfurt in the custody of the Foreign Exchange Depository (FED), a section of the Office of Military Government, United States (OMGUS) of the American occupation force in Germany. The FED worked with Allied governments, occupation authorities, and the Tripartite Gold Commission (TGC) in inventorying and making distributions.

The TGC had its origins in the Paris Conference on Reparation of 1945 attended by the representatives of the governments of Albania, Australia, Belgium, Canada, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Egypt, France, Greece, India, Luxembourg, New Zealand, the Netherlands, Norway, the Union of South Africa, the United Kingdom, the United States, and Yugoslavia. An Agreement on Reparation was signed on January 14, 1946.

Subsequently, Austria, Italy, and Poland joined the other countries in adhering to the Paris Agreement for the restitution of monetary gold as set out in Part III of the Agreement on Reparation, entitled "Restitution of Monetary Gold." Basically, this provided that monetary gold looted by Germany and recovered by the Allied Forces, and monetary gold recovered from third countries, should be pooled and distributed to claimant countries in proportion to their losses.

The British, French, and U.S. governments became responsible for verifying claims and distributing the gold. On September 27, 1946, the Tripartite Commission for the Restitution of Monetary Gold was established, and the three governments each appointed a commissioner. The three commissioners were instructed by, and reported to, their respective governments. The Paris Agreement of 1946 did not impose any formal requirements on the three governments to report back to the signatories of the Paris Agreement or to the claimant governments. The proceedings of the TGC were considered confidential to the member governments because of the sensitivity of the adjudication of competing claims and of international movements of monetary gold.

The TGC was established in Brussels, co-located with the Inter-Allied Reparation Agency (IARA). The first commissioners were also the three governments' commissioners to the IARA, though the commission was constitutionally separate from and independent of the IARA. The TGC was recognized as an international organization as a result of a Belgian law of August 1, 1952, retroactive to September 27, 1946.

By mid-1948 a considerable quantity of looted monetary gold had been taken into custody by the Allied authorities, primarily the Americans, or identified as having been deposited in their countries. By July 1948, a total of about 306,343 kg (kilograms) of gold in bars and coins had been deposited with the Federal Reserve Bank of New York or the Bank of England or was held at the FED in Frankfurt by OMGUS. By December 1974, the grand total available for restitution was 336,890 kg (about $4.1 billion at today's prices).

On March 13, 1947, the TGC issued a questionnaire to potential claimant countries seeking information that would allow it to make awards from the gold pool on a proportionate basis. Claims were submitted by Albania, Austria, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Greece, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Poland, and Yugoslavia. Their claims totaled about 735,548 kg, more than double the amount in the gold pool. The total claims validated by the TGC came to about 514,060 kg.

The TGC decided that since the amount claimed was more than the amount in the gold pool, the claimant governments would each receive approximately 64 percent of their claim. The drafting of adjudications of claims began in 1952, and by 1958 ten adjudications had been signed by the commissioners on behalf of their governments. The eleventh, for Czechoslovakia, was signed in 1982.

In October 1947, the TGC began making preliminary distributions of gold. By November 1950, a total of about 266,210 kg of gold (worth about $3.3 billion at today's prices) was distributed to Austria, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, and Yugoslavia. The distribution of the share allocated to Albania was delayed because of a counterclaim by Italy to most of the gold in question. No preliminary distribution was made to Greece because the amount of the Greek claim was very small. Poland did not receive any of the preliminary distribution because, as a late adherent to the Paris Agreement, its claim was not made until 1950.

A second, quasi-final distribution took place between 1958 and 1982, when a total of about 58,016 kg (worth about $720 million at today's prices) was distributed to Austria, Belgium, Greece, Italy, Luxembourg, Yugoslavia, the Netherlands, Poland, and Czechoslovakia. The distribution to Albania did not take place until the winter of 1995–1996.

Most of the remaining gold held by the TGC, some six tons, worth about $60 million in today's dollars, was in September 1998, with the approval of most claimant nations, turned over to a special fund for victims of Nazi persecution. In Paris on September 9, 1998, the TGC declared its mission complete and opened its records, some 110 boxes, to the public. About $300,000 worth of the remaining gold at that time was still under dispute by the governments that made up the former Yugoslavia; each wants it all. The British government will decide the issue if no accord can be reached.

REEL INDEX

Entries in the index refer to specific folders within Records of the Tripartite Commission for the Restitution of Monetary Gold, 1946–1998, Part 1: Meetings Files and Background Documents. The folders in this microform publication are grouped under two headings: Meeting Files and Background Documents. Significant issues, events, actions, and policy decisions are highlighted under the heading Major Topics. Individual topics have not been listed for the French-language version of the Tripartite Gold Commission's report. The four-digit number on the far left is the frame number at which the main file folder begins. The indented four-digit numbers are the frame numbers at which subfiles within the main folders begin. In the Meeting Files section, the subfiles and documents within the subfiles have been arranged in reverse chronological order. Where applicable, the foreign-language file titles have been retained with English translations in brackets.

SUBJECT INDEX

The following index is a guide to the major subjects in this microfilm publication. The first number after each entry refers to the reel, while the four-digit number following the colon refers to the frame number at which a particular folder containing information on the subject begins. Hence, 2: 0575 directs the user to the folder that begins at Frame 0575 of Reel 2. By referring to the Reel Index, which constitutes the initial segment of this guide, the user will find the folder title and a list of major topics, arranged in the order in which the material appears on the film.
