SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The U.S. State Department Central Files are the definitive source of American diplomatic reporting on political, military, social, and economic developments throughout the world in the twentieth century. This edition consists of the Central Files for Germany for the period between February 1963 and 1966. The files are arranged according to the State Department Records Classification System, February 1963–1973. The subjects from the filing system included in this edition are AID (Economic Assistance), CSM (Communism), DEF (Defense Affairs), INT (Intelligence), and POL (Political Affairs and Relations). The documents consist primarily of reports of meetings between U.S. and foreign government officials and leaders; cables sent and received by diplomatic personnel; newspaper summaries, translations, and clippings; draft proposals of treaties and proclamations; speeches and aide-mémoire; and reports and statistics on political, military, and social affairs.

The focus of this edition of the Central Files for Germany is, much like the status of Berlin between the end of World War II and the fall of communism in 1989, somewhat undefined. Although much of the collection centers on West Berlin's relationship to the outside world, there is also a considerable amount of detail pertaining to the Federal Republic of Germany (FRG) more broadly, which throughout this period remained distinct from Berlin. For additional documents on the FRG, see the corresponding microfilm collection on Central Files for the Federal Republic of Germany, 1963–1966.

This collection opens with documents from the AID category, dealing with economic aid given to Berlin by the former Allied powers, namely the United States, France, and the United Kingdom. In addition, the documents detail the growing prominence of the FRG as a major source of aid, along with a corresponding reduction of the U.S. presence. Indeed, a recurring theme throughout this collection is the concern within both Berlin and the FRG about the extent of long-term U.S. resolve to support and protect the region against Soviet aggression.

Next is a brief series of items from the CSM category, relating to Communist activity. These documents cover such issues as publications, propaganda, and defections from the Soviet zone. Much more detail on interactions between East and West can be found in the POL category.

Documents from the DEF category, which together span about two reels, cover the second-largest topic within this collection. These documents reflect the evolving presence of the Federal Republic of Germany as a major military power during this period, especially the FRG's rearmament and the apprehensions this process evoked. Discussions on "nuclear sharing" in Western Europe, armament purchases and sales by the FRG, and military aid given by the FRG to developing countries in Asia and Africa are main topics of interest. Berlin, naturally, takes center stage: sparked by earlier Soviet attempts to sever West Berlin's lifeline to the FRG, the Germans made considerable efforts to build up stockpiles of food, medical supplies, raw materials, and energy sources, and these documents chronicle this effort in detail. Meanwhile, alongside the attention paid to West German rearmament and the struggle for West Berlin's freedom, there is considerable discussion of the East German military's capabilities and interaction with both Communist and non-Communist countries. Following the DEF category are several documents from the INT category, dealing with intelligence. The INT documents are not substantive, and researchers interested in intelligence-related topics should consult the DEF and POL categories instead.

The remaining eleven reels, composing the heart of the collection, contain documents from the POL category, which covers a broad set of topics from foreign relations to internal politics. Certain topics appear and reappear within these reels, many involving Berlin and its relationship with both the FRG and the Soviet bloc. The resignation of Chancellor Konrad Adenauer after fourteen years at the helm of the FRG made the mid-1960s in Germany a period of both uncertainty and promise. While political leaders in Berlin and the FRG were acutely aware of the Soviet threat, they nonetheless were optimistic that a successful resolution of the “German question”—i.e., the country’s unexpected yet stubbornly enduring partition—might accompany a broader rapprochement between East and West.

The topics detailed in the POL documents reflect this potent confluence of danger and opportunity. Along with extensive discussion of negotiations between East and West Berlin on the subject of travel passes (POL 23-10), the documents return again and again to various reunification proposals submitted and debated among the Western powers, spearheaded by the FRG (POL 28 and POL 32-4). While these proposals invariably went nowhere, they nevertheless demonstrate that the division of Germany was by no means viewed as immutable. While the documents testify to ongoing friction between East and West, manifested especially in daily incidents and violations along the borders with the Soviet occupation zone (POL 38), there is little sense of an ossified state of affairs.

Many of the people who dominated the politics and social life of Berlin and the FRG in the 1960s feature prominently in this collection, from Chancellor Ludwig Erhard to Governing Mayor Willy Brandt and Foreign Minister Gerhard Schroeder. At the same time that these men were searching for a resolution of the “German question,” the country remained plagued by memories of its recent past, as documents on Nazi prisoners and the heated debate over extension of the statute of limitations on Nazi war crimes attest (POL 27-12). This was particularly brought home when Erwin Schuele, the FRG’s chief prosecutor for Nazi war crimes, was forced to resign after his own former Nazi affiliations emerged.

Information on these and other topics can be found by consulting the Subject Index at the back of the guide, or by browsing through the Reel Index.

SOURCE NOTE

LexisNexis microfilmed this collection from the holdings of the National Archives, College Park, Maryland, Record Group 59: Records of the Department of State, Central Foreign Policy Files, Subject-Numeric Files, February 1963–1966, for Germany. Materials from the following Subject-Numeric File categories were included in this microfilm publication: Economic (selected), and Political and Defense. Specific subject categories include AID (all types of aid) only from the Economic Subject-Numeric File category; and CSM (Communism), DEF (Defense), INT (Intelligence), and POL (Political Affairs and Relations) from the Political and Defense Subject-Numeric File Category.

EDITORIAL NOTE

The Subject-Numeric Files for February 1963 through July 1973 are arranged by subject-numeric categories, not by country. Therefore, some file folders will contain multiple subject categories. In addition, some folders will have more than one country represented by a single subject category.

LexisNexis has microfilmed all available documents relating to the subject categories listed above for Germany. In addition to the documents, LexisNexis has filmed file folders when possible. LexisNexis has excluded from microfilming only exact duplicate copies of documents. LexisNexis has microfilmed the documents as they are arranged at the National Archives. In a small number of instances, some documents have been misfiled and/or misclassified by the National Archives and/or State Department. LexisNexis has included, in brackets, corrected citations for these items. A few Document Withdrawal Sheets exist in the files, and LexisNexis has filmed them. Withdrawal Sheets itemize documents that have been withdrawn from the files, due to national security restrictions, by the National Archives staff.

STATE DEPARTMENT RECORDS CLASSIFICATION SYSTEM, FEBRUARY 1963–JULY 1973

Essential to the effective administration of the State Department and its overseas posts is the management of records. In keeping with the State Department's program to improve and modernize its administrative processes, the department developed a new comprehensive records classification system in February–March 1963 (used until July 1973).

This new uniform file system enabled users to file and find material rapidly—the usefulness of recorded information being largely dependent upon the logical arrangement of records. The new system applied to both official and working files.

The new system was based on several years of research and embodied many substantial contributions made by departmental and overseas personnel. An effort was made to provide sufficient flexibility and subject matter coverage to meet the needs of offices and posts both large and small.

A. PURPOSE AND SCOPE

The new Records Classification System embodied a uniform official file system to be used throughout the department and its overseas posts. It was intended for use by operating offices as well as by departmental and post central files operations. The new system did not apply to certain types of case files, however, such as official personnel files, security investigative files, voucher files, and so forth. Offices continued to maintain chronological files where necessary or desirable.

B. ARRANGEMENT AND CONTENT

1. Subject File Outlines

The attached file outlines (which can be found immediately following this description of the classification system) compose the new file system. They were arranged within seven broad subject matter areas (known earlier as classes), with each area including specific subdivisions of related secondary and tertiary code symbols.

2. Special Instructions

a. International Organizations and Conferences

This system provided a special method for handling records accumulated in large quantities by offices that were primarily interested in a specific organization or conference rather than in the subject matter with which it dealt. Use of this special feature of the new file system afforded such offices a method for organizing this type of record material to meet their own reference needs within the framework of the new system. It proved of particular use to the Bureau of International Organization Affairs and to United States Missions to international organizations, such as the U.S. United Nations Delegation.

b. Commercial Officers

This instruction to the system was prepared in cooperation with the Department of Commerce for the special guidance of commercial officers in their use of the new file system. It provided for pre-coding of commercial-economic reports with the appropriate subject matter code symbols.

c. Peace Corps Representatives

This instruction to the system was prepared in cooperation with the Peace Corps for the guidance of its field representatives in records organization and maintenance. It prescribed the use of the appropriate administrative subject outlines for Peace Corps records administration.

d. U.S. Information Service (USIS)

Special subject designations were developed in cooperation with the U.S. Information Agency for use by those posts at which USIS files were maintained by the post's Central Records Unit. These designations were included in the Culture & Information subject outline.

C. TYPE OF SYSTEM

1. Subject-Numeric System

The new uniform file system was of the subject-numeric type. It was selected because of the flexibility that it provided for expansion purposes and the simplicity of file designations for marking purposes. A mnemonic symbol was selected for each of the fifty-five primary subjects for which file outlines had been developed. These symbols ranged from one to four letters in length and had been chosen because of their meaning or obvious relationship to the subject matter for which they stood. In some cases the symbol was identical with an office symbol (e.g., PPT for Passports & Citizenship, AV for Aviation (Civil)). In other cases the key letters in the primary subject constituted the symbol (e.g., CON for Consular Affairs (General), REF for Refugees & Migration, AGR for Agriculture (General)).

While many small offices used the primary subjects alone, larger offices required further breakdowns of the primary subjects for more detailed subject matter coverage. Simple serial numbers were assigned to subject breakdowns at both the secondary and tertiary level. A paper relating to the subject of agricultural production in general, for example, was classified AGR 12; a paper dealing with technological advances in agricultural production was AGR 12-1. The most detailed subdivision contained no more than four digits, making for a relatively simple file designation. Sample Reel Index entries with Subject-Numeric Codes are included with this introductory matter.

2. Use of Identical Numbers for Similar Subjects

As an additional aid, the same number was assigned to similar secondary and tertiary subjects appearing in different subject file outlines. In most outlines the first five secondary subjects were standard (e.g., General Policy, Plans, and Programs; General Reports and Statistics; Organizations and Conferences; Agreements and Treaties; and Laws and Regulations). This same principle was applied to other similar or related subjects (e.g., Communist Bloc activities in aid, trade, and educational and cultural fields were assigned a “6” number—AID 6, FT 6, EDU 6, respectively; production and consumption was assigned a “12” number in the various industry outlines—AGR 12, INCO 12, PET 12).

3. Expansion of Existing Subjects

While no attempt was made to provide breakdowns for subject matter beyond the tertiary level, there were cases in which an office might want or need to subdivide a secondary or tertiary subject alphabetically by name, geographic location, or other appropriate breakdown. For example, papers relating to visits by foreign dignitaries were subdivided by name (e.g., POL 7 Visits—Adenauer); papers relating to a trade fair by location (e.g., TP 8 Fairs—Moscow); or papers relating to a thermal power project by type (e.g., FSE 12 Electric Power—Thermal).

D. SPECIAL FEATURES

1. Flexibility

Flexibility was an important feature of the uniform file system. The new system embodied an unusual amount of flexibility by providing users with several methods of arranging material according to their specific requirements. Three important areas of choice are indicated below:

a. Subject vs. Geographic Arrangement

Within each subject file outline, where appropriate, alternative ways of arranging material by subject or area/country were possible. An office interested only in a specific subject without regard to country selected the method of arrangement described above. An office that was primarily interested in specific subject matter but with a secondary concern for a geographic area or country selected the method described in Instruction "C" (Type of System). A geographic bureau or other office primarily concerned with a specific country used the method of arranging first by country and thereunder by subject described in Instruction "B" (Arrangement and Content).

b. Treatment of International Organizations and Conferences

Most offices accumulated a varying amount of material on international organizations and conferences in which the U.S. government was represented or participated. The interests of each office and its responsibility for international organization and conference activities determined the amount of record material that it accumulated and the method by which it arranged material to meet user needs.

An office that had a limited interest in such organizations and conferences and accumulated a relatively small quantity of papers probably found the "3" (Organizations and Conferences) classification within the appropriate subject outline adequate. An office that had a major interest in and responsibility for an organization such as the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), or the World Health Organization (WHO), however, adopted the method of arrangement described in Instruction "D" (Special Features). Under this arrangement a special subject file by title of organization was set up under the appropriate subject outline, using any of the secondary or tertiary breakdowns as necessary.

The Bureau of International Organization Affairs, special missions to international organizations, and other offices that accumulated a large volume of material on a specific organization or conference used the special instruction method of arrangement. This instruction contained a standard list of administrative subjects common to international organizations and conferences. It also provided a unique method of arranging substantive program material relating to the specific organization or conference by selecting appropriate subjects, permitting an organizational approach within the framework of a uniform subject system.

c. Treatment of Industries and Commodities

Because of the importance of the commercial-economic reporting program, special attention was given to the treatment of industries and commodities under the new file system. Specific subject outlines were developed for the most significant industries, such as Agriculture (General), Fuels & Energy, Petroleum, Telecommunications, and Transportation. With the exception of Agriculture (General), these industry outlines covered the related commodities and products as well.

To take care of the large number of other industries, commodities, products, and specific agricultural crops, an alphabetical guide was developed as an adjunct to the Industries & Commodities (General) outline. This list, referred to as INCO (specific), provided offices with a simple method of filing materials on specific commodities, regardless of whether they were in their natural or manufactured state.

Instructions preceding the alphabetical listing offered users a choice of methods of arrangement within the list. For example, one office may have preferred to group all minerals and metals together while another office may have found it preferable to file by the specific mineral or metal.

2. Detailed Instructions (Miscellaneous)

In addition to the instructions above, alternative methods of arrangement, detailed statements, or explanations of the coverage of specific secondary and tertiary breakdowns of the primary subject were provided on an ad hoc basis. Specific cross-references to related subject matter within the same or in other outlines were also indicated. Classifiers found these instructions useful in determining proper file designations, particularly in the case of subject matter that may not have been familiar to them.

3. Country Symbols

A list of standard country abbreviations, used for coding papers relating to specific countries, is contained in this guide.

SAMPLE REEL INDEX ENTRIES

Entries in the Reel Index refer to specific documents within a Confidential U.S. State Department Central Files collection. The documents are arranged by the Subject File Outlines noted in the "State Department Records Classification System, February 1963–July 1973," contained in this guide. In order to improve access to some subject categories, LexisNexis has included selected "major topics" (enclosed in brackets) on the line below the subject description. In addition, for categories that are over one hundred pages, LexisNexis has subdivided these groups by month and year.

The four-digit number on the far left represents the frame number at which a particular Subject-Numeric Classification begins. This is followed the Subject-Numeric symbol, a country code, and an explanation of the Subject-Numeric Classification. The samples below provide a description of the arrangement of the information in a representative State Department Central Files guide.

ABBREVIATIONS

REEL INDEX

Entries in this index refer to specific documents within Confidential U.S. State Department Central Files, Germany, February 1963–1966, Part 1: Political, Governmental, and National Defense Affairs. These documents are arranged by the Subject File Outlines noted in the “State Department Records Classification System, February 1963–July 1973,” on page xi. See the Sample Reel Index Entries on page xxix for a description of the arrangement of the information in this guide. For some subjects, the guide writer has included additional topics (enclosed in brackets) following the subject description. In addition, for those subjects numbering more than one hundred pages, the guide writer has subdivided these groupings chronologically by month and year.

LexisNexis has filmed these documents as they are filed at the National Archives. In some instances, there are documents that appear to have been misclassified by the Department of State. LexisNexis has retained the original subject-numeric symbol and, within brackets, enclosed a different subject-numeric symbol and its accompanying subject citation. In addition, misfiled documents have also been included in brackets.

Many reel index entries include country abbreviations. A Country Abbreviations list can be found on page xix of this guide.

The four-digit number on the far left represents the frame number at which a particular subject-numeric classification begins.

This collection of U.S. State Department Central Files: Germany, February 1963–1966, opens with documents dealing with economic aid given to Berlin by the former Allied powers, namely the United States, France, and the United Kingdom. These documents detail the growing prominence of the Federal Republic of Germany (FRG) as a major source of aid, along with a corresponding reduction of the U.S. presence. Indeed, a recurring theme throughout this collection is the concern within both Berlin and the FRG about the extent of long-term U.S. resolve to support and protect the region against Soviet aggression.

Berlin, naturally, takes center stage: sparked by earlier Soviet attempts to sever West Berlin's lifeline to the FRG, the Germans made considerable efforts to build up stockpiles of food, medical supplies, raw materials, and energy sources, and these documents chronicle this effort in detail. In addition, many of the people who dominated the politics and social life of Berlin and the FRG in the 1960s also feature prominently in this collection, from Chancellor Ludwig Erhard to Governing Mayor Willy Brandt and Foreign Minister Gerhard Schroeder. At the same time that these men were searching for a resolution of the "German question," the country remained plagued by memories of its recent past, as documents on Nazi prisoners and the heated debate over extension of the statute of limitations on Nazi war crimes attest.

The documents in this collection also reflect the evolving presence of the Federal Republic of Germany as a major military power during this period, especially the FRG's rearmament and the apprehensions this process evoked. Discussions on "nuclear sharing" in Western Europe, armament purchases and sales by the FRG, and military aid given by the FRG to developing countries in Asia and Africa are main topics of interest.
