SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

This microfilm collection details the worldview of foreign policy during the administration of Richard M. Nixon. This collection chronicles the realism that both President Nixon and his policy advisers used in mentally ordering the world and in formulating policy. It highlights the diplomacy that the Nixon administration employed to achieve Vietnamization, détente, and other objectives. It reveals worries about U.S. power and American credibility, while tracing the construction of the Nixon Doctrine to meet perceived challenges.

Policy-making Reforms

Before the realist Weltanschauung of President Nixon and his national security advisor, Henry Kissinger could function, policymakers needed to analyze, plan, and identify the nation's capabilities, interests, and objectives. Since bureaucratization hindered the thoughtful, yet agile, approach to statecraft favored by the president and his national security advisor, reforming the policymaking process emerged as one of their key goals. This documentary collection outlines the reform of America's foreign policymaking. They show how foreign policy decisions moved almost entirely into the hands of Nixon and his national security advisor.

Foundations of Diplomacy

This collection provides the intellectual and practical foundations for Nixon's policy formulation. Realism, triangular diplomacy, and linkage-making provided President Nixon with an understanding of world strategy and a negotiating approach that fueled his pursuit of détente and accommodation. Common wisdom within the administration held that the Sino-Soviet split, Soviet-American strategic parity, and certain challenges facing the Kremlin within its own sphere of influence had combined to create a situation in which a lessening of Cold War tensions was in the interest of both nations.

The following are examples of Nixon's diplomatic foundations at work and are included in this collection:

Realism—détente produced dramatic results in May 1972 with the Moscow Summit, where the United States and the Soviet Union signed the first Strategic Arms Limitation agreement.

Triangular diplomacy—the deepening Sino-Soviet split and the emergence of China as a global power presented the Nixon administration with an opportunity to establish relations with the PRC which, by serving as a counterweight to the Soviet Union, would provide additional leverage for extracting concessions from Moscow.

Linkage-making—Nixon and Kissinger went to great lengths to link progress on détente and SALT to the Kremlin's willingness to press its client in Hanoi to negotiate an end to the fighting in Vietnam.

The White House Central Files and the FO Subject Category

The FO subject category in the White House Central Files contains materials pertaining to international relations and the plans, policies, procedures and programs concerning foreign countries of governments, such as the administration of foreign affairs, economic development, mutual security and foreign information and exchange activities. Frequent correspondents include President Nixon, Rose Mary Woods, Henry Kissinger and other National Security Council Staff members such as Gen. Alexander Haig, Jeanne Davis, Harold Saunders, Helmut Sonnenfeldt,

Brig. Gen. Brent Scowcroft, Robert Houdek, John Holdridge and Richard Solomon; Peter Flanigan, Peter Peterson, David Parker, H. R. Haldeman, Herbert Klein, Frank Shakespeare, Henry Kearns, Dwight Chapin, George Shultz, William Timmons, James Keogh, William Rogers and Theodore Eliot, Jr.

The Executive file category within this subject file includes the correspondence of the President, White House Staff and Administration officials with heads of state, members of Congress, business, patriotic, and special interest organizations; school groups, entertainers, political party members and the general public concerning foreign policies, business ventures or travel. The General file category mainly contains correspondence of the President and White House Staff with members of Congress and the general public, however, many of the same correspondents and subjects are found in both file categories. Some of the files are subdivided alphabetically by name or subject (/A-Z), numerically by country (/CO #) or by job appointment (/A).

FO Foreign Affairs

This category mainly contains articles, briefings and speeches relating to foreign policy by the President, Henry Kissinger, Roy Ash, Peter Peterson, the President's Advisory Council on Executive Organization (PACEO) and others. Correspondents include: The National Council of Churches, William Kinter of the Foreign Policy Research Institute, Samuel Gottlieb of the National Committee for a Sane Nuclear Policy (SANE) and Prince Norodom Sihanouk of Cambodia. There is also correspondence concerning the Lithuanian seaman defector Simas Kurdika.

FO 1 Buildings - Grounds
