SCOPE AND CONTENT NOTE

The war in Bosnia and Herzegovina came about as a result of the breakup of Yugoslavia. Crisis emerged in Yugoslavia with the weakening of the Communist system at the end of the Cold War. In Yugoslavia, the national Communist party, officially called Alliance or League of Communists of Yugoslavia, was losing its ideological potency, while the nationalist and separatist ideologies were on the rise in the late 1980s. This was particularly noticeable in Serbia, Croatia and Bosnia and Herzegovina, and to a lesser extent in Slovenia and Republic of Macedonia.

Bosnia and Herzegovina has historically been a multi-ethnic state. In 1990, its population included approximately 43% of Bosnians, 31% of Serbs, and 17% of Croats. In the first multi-party election that took place in November 1990 in Bosnia and Herzegovina, the three largest nationalist parties in the country won, the Party of Democratic Action, the Serbian Democratic Party and the Croatian Democratic Union. These parties divided political power along their ethnic lines.

Throughout 1991, international and national political maneuvering failed to prevent Bosnia from slipping into civil war. On March 5, 1992, the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina declaration its independence and Serbs paramilitary forces, supported by the former Yugoslavian army attacked different parts of the country. Within a short time, state administration of Bosnia and Herzegovina effectively ceased to function having lost control over large swathes of its territory. The Serbs wanted all lands where Serbs had a majority, eastern and western Bosnia. The Croats and their leader Franjo Tudjman also aimed at securing parts of Bosnia and Herzegovina as Croatian. The policies of Franjo Tudjman towards Bosnia and Herzegovina were never totally transparent and always included the ultimate aim of expanding Croatia's borders. The Bosnian civil population was an easy target, because the Bosnian government forces were poorly equipped and unprepared for the war.

This collection consists of materials related to the former Yugoslavia, particularly Bosnia, and presidential decision-making. This collection provides researchers with the opportunity to develop a comprehensive picture of the many issues and the impacts of U.S. policy on the newly-created republics.

Issues addressed include diplomatic recognition, humanitarian relief, military intervention, and international negotiations. Documentation consists of cables, NSC materials, press releases, press summaries, news items, and letters from Congress. The press releases originated with such organizations as the White House Press Office, the UN, and AmeriCares (a charitable organization). Many of the press summaries were faxed to the White House by the Republic of Serbia's Ministry of Information. Letters from members of Congress urge action of one kind or another in the Balkans and often include supporting material such as newspaper articles or reports. Most responses to Congress are form letters created by the Administration.
